

The Dance Design School
Teaching the heart of dance & music

The Helen McLennan Founder Scholarship For the aspiring ballet dancer.

“Learning is not a preparation for life, it is life itself”. Mrs. McLennan has spent a lifetime pursuing the art of dance and her great love of Ballet. Her passion for dance has led her across the world, from a childhood spent in Kenya, learning from a Russian teacher, to England for the Royal Academy of Dance training, to Canada and eventually to the United States, where she founded both the Hudson Valley Dance Theatre and the Dance Design School in 1984. Over the years Helen has taught and learned from hundreds of Dance Design School students. Although she is now retired in Mexico and volunteering to teach for Isaac Hernandez’s father Hector and his schools, she is always thrilled to hear from her former students, many of whom went on to pursue careers in the arts themselves. Others are now doctors, lawyers, scientists, Disney royalty, Broadway performers, and even teachers. These former students have formed lifetime friendships with each other, and have traveled all over the globe. Coming full circle, two former Dance Design School students of hers are currently teachers in Africa themselves, eagerly sharing their love of Ballet with their new pupils: “I love how dance can transcend generations and continents and languages!”

This scholarship represents Mrs. McLennan’s deeply held belief that ballet, especially, is the key to expanded learning throughout life. Her current students, some of whom are between 50 and 85 years old, are testament to that belief.
